Introducing... people as they see themselves.

Given the chance to photograph themselves — via one Nikon motor drive with remote cable release cleverly (?) concealed in a refrigerator box — BG students and faculty revealed their true personalities in their own words and pictures.

"Rebate" anyone?

What's the deal!

Hello, Doctor.

Never again will I eat one greasy pizza, two Baby Ruth's, wash it all down with a cup of cold coffee, and talk to Steve in one afternoon.

Flattery will get you everywhere.

Hey, we have the makings here for a new coed fraternity — only wish we could decide on a name. It'll be either Tappa Kega Beer or I Grabba Thigh.

Hey Angie, do you know this guy? No Carol, never saw him before.

Dear Mom: Please send money, the blood bank is closed.

You know you're taking life too seriously when it takes a do-it-yourself photo to make you laugh at yourself.

Isn't BG super?

"Bleh" to you, too!

What's really going to happen when I push this button?

You could've just put your coat down to help me cross the puddle. Now what will your parents say when you tell them you have a hernia.

I'm really not smiling, just ignoring the situation.

The birds from the "Nest" wonder: "What's all this Broo Ha Ha?"

Ah, don't give me that bull!

Trees; no cloth.

You can push the button next time.

Accounting was my major.

I smell clean . . . Woo!

I'll tell you, this Union food will do it to you every time.

Hey, Ma, remember the protein shampoo you sent me?

There's no business like journalism! . . .

Marsha, you have the most kissable lips at BG. My name's not Marsha, it's Pat! Oops!

Isn't there a better picture of me?
I sure took enough.

I can't believe I smoked the whole bowl.

Da, I go to college.

We sure pulled the wool over their eyes this time, didn't we, Steve.

Can you think of a better way to say goodbye to the "Green?"

I always wanted to see what I really look like around campus. Oh well . . . what can I say.

Speaking frankly, Joe, the wind here at Bowling Green really blows. Ya dig?

Ra-Ju-Rah

I hope no one finds out my hair is in pincurls!

BG's first pair of Siamese twins — joined at the molars since birth.

Help! There's a midget swinging on my necktie!

I live in the home for disturbed soccer players, but they let me out just for this.

Faculty

Faculty are very involved people ... involved with student's progress, their own personal work, or service to others. Here are just a few.

Seeing students do well in class and eventually on the job is teaching's most exciting reward, according to JAMES R. GORDON, associate professor of journalism.

Gordon has a unique style of teaching photo-journalism. The first week of classes, students are given simulated news assignments which they must fulfill as if they were working on a newspaper. Although camera equipment is new to them, they must produce a finished print in one week.

Exposure to professional photographer's work is also a major teaching device of Gordon's. This is done through slide/tape presentations with a sequence of slides narrated by the photographer.

Gordon demands perfection from the beginner to the advanced student, and becomes a critic of high calibre for the majors determined to make photography their career.

Being able to teach as well as work each summer for the Toledo Blade makes Gordon content in his position at the University.

RAY BROWNE, director of the first and largest popular culture department in the U.S., takes great pride in the development of the University's department.

"It all began in 1967 when we started the Journal of Popular Culture, and was then followed by the opening of the center in 1968," he explained.

The popular culture department has grown quickly. It boasts a $500,000 library, its own popular press, four professors, 43 graduate students, and approximately 600 undergraduates each quarter.

When interviewed by Time magazine, Browne said the department "deals with a very important segment of society, the contemporary scene. Popular culture is holding us up to ourselves to see. It can tell us who we are, what we are and why."

Upon graduation, majors may find themselves being placed in such fields as television, radio, and entertainment, Browne said.

"Our graduates are better prepared for an assortment of jobs after majoring in this field," he added.

DR. AGNES HOOLEY, professor of recreation, stresses the importance of growth in the structure of the recreation department.

For her, the three components of life are work, play, and drudgery. When play is absent, growth has stopped, she explained.

She is currently training students for jobs that do not exist, but will in the future, she said. And is pushing forward to a time when recreation is just as important as business in the minds of society.

Right now, she said that the students are running the department: planning the programs, forming their own honorary, and formulating curriculums. In actuality, the faculty assist the students, rather than command them.

SHIRLEY MEEKER, chairperson of the political science department, is one of three female chairpersons at the University. The other two are in the traditionally female-dominated areas of nursing and home economics.

"I haven't found that being a woman makes any difference," she said. It depends on how comfortable a woman is in the role, she explained. "And I have felt comfortable."

Meeker added that the University needs more women as administrators so the students can relate to them.

DR. RICHARD BOWERS has been instrumental in the development of the University's human performance laboratory for the past six years.

The facility, located in the basement of the Men's Gym since 1971, was designed to serve as a center for teaching and researching the area of physical fitness evaluation, athletic stress, and man's adaptation to environmental stresses, such as heat stress.

Dr. Bowers said that he hopes the lab will help influence people to good health thinking.

Other projects undertaken by Dr. Bowers include working with the sports program to observe, and then alter training to get the optimum performance from individual athletes; and working in collaboration with people from Ball State on the problem of energy storage.

Dr. Bowers checks a subject's metabolism through a treadmill fatigue test.

Dr. Statz shares a youngster's joy in solving her first computer problem.

Teaching computer programming to 40 Bowling Green children age 9-11 may not seem an easy task, but it is successful for DR. JOYCE STATZ, assistant professor of computer science, and 13 student volunteers.

"We have had enrollment problems since last fall," she explained. "The problem is always that more kids want to come than we can accommodate. We always have a waiting list."

"Most kids are very excited about their programs," she added. "And are reluctant to terminate after three quarters of work."

While working on her doctorate at Syracuse University, Dr. Statz directed a project to teach children computer programming and study changes in their problem solving behavior. It worked there, so she decided to start a similar program at the University.

"Kids about ten-years-old are just developing formal logical concepts and can begin handling computer concepts like 'variable', 'program', 'loop', and so on," she said. "They can also deal with mathematical and text-oriented problems easily handled by the computer."

"The project (also) allows University students to get teaching experience with a very relaxed atmosphere," she said. "And do the kids a favor, too."

"Entertainment first and magic second" is the philosophy of JERRY ARGETSINGER, a professional magician and doctoral candidate in theatre at the University.

Argetsinger considers himself more of an entertainer than a "mystifier". He resents being known as a razzle-dazzle because his "aim is only to make people laugh, and magic is just a tool for me to do that," he said.

"Magic has put me through school," he added. He performs about four shows a month. "Any more than that gets in the way of my school work," he said. Prices for his shows range from $50 to $250.

Argetsinger, one of the six or seven performing magicians in the area, was named Magician of the Year of Northwestern Ohio by the International Brotherhood of Magicians.

That organization is also the topic of his thesis work — the 50 year history of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, a professional society of which he is a member.

"I try to make the material comprehensible and, hopefully, meaningful to students without being dishonest about what the subject really involves," said DR. PEGGY HURST, professor of chemistry.

And Dr. Hurst truly does have the students best interests in mind throughout the course of her teaching.

"Since we went on quarters, I make a sincere effort to get marks back to students within the three week drop/add period," she said. "People unsuccessful leave at that point.

"I try to make help available, but I'm not going to jam it down anyone's throat," she added.

"What I expect of students in 100 chemistry is entirely different from what I expect from students in 121 chemistry," she said. "And I've always thought a 'C' was a respectable grade.

"You must remember that I do all of my teaching in beginning and not advanced courses," she added. Although she mentioned that teaching beginning chemistry year after year was not monotonous.

"Students are different, and there tends to be fashions in chemistry," she said. "The fundamentals don't change, but there are new books, new ways to present things, and it's fun to experiment with these."

After attending graduate school, Dr. Hurst had a choice to make between teaching and performing industrial research.

"I made deliberate personal reasons(sic) to choose teaching over industrial work," she said. One reason being that she could be her own boss, she added.

"Learning while students learn is my philosophy about teaching," according to SINGER BUCHANAN, associate professor of speech.

Bucky, as he is known to most of his friends and students, virtually lives in the television studio on the fourth floor of South Hall where he teaches television programming and production classes.

Along with teaching his television courses, Buchanan is also involved with the production of multimedia shows for the international and minority students on campus.

Buchanan considers himself "relevant, right now, concerned and positive.

"I don't have time for negatives," he added.

JOHN HEPLER, the University theatre's designer and technical director, has designed the sets for 272 major productions in his 26 years at the University.

Hepler said that he finds each set a challenge because there are many guides that determine how a set for a given play will look — he has to conform slightly to the suggestions of the playwright, ideas of the director, and his own ideas and research.

Although he has worked in commercial productions, he prefers educational theatre for two reasons: he doesn't like the commercialism of the professional theatre, and he finds great personal satisfaction watching the success of some of his students.

Hepler explained his philosophy of technical theatre designing.

"The designer shouldn't find glory," he said. "He, like the set, should be just part of the background."

JANE L. FORSYTH, professor of geology, enjoys "turning students on to geology, and making it have meaning."

Forsyth is happy when students become interested in one of her introductory courses, and then proceed to higher course levels in geology.

"I grade all of the student papers and tests myself," she said, "for no one knows any better than myself what was discussed."

Forsyth also works with the biology department where she uses her skills to describe how geology influences ecology.

Besides teaching, Forsyth reviews a number of books and writes stories for various scientific journals. Last year, she was editor of the Ohio Journal of Science, a professional magazine.

DR. MELVIN HYMAN, administrative director of the Speech and Hearing Clinic at the University, opens his clinic doors to all ages with problems in speech and hearing. He explained the clinic's purpose as serving the needs of the community, and giving students training and experience.

Students are offered internships and can administer therapy under faculty advisement.

Public needs are met as shown by Dr. Hyman's efforts to aid one of the housemothers on campus who suffered a stroke which impaired her speech faculties.

Dr. Hyman also works with the Northwestern Ohio Head Start Program, is faculty advisor to Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, and is president of the scholarship awarding fraternity of Phi Kappa Phi.

"Just call me Hal." That's one of the first things a student is apt to hear from jewelry professor HAL HASSELSCHWERT.

During his class, Hasselschwert answers more questions and remedies more jeweler's problems than one can imagine. His attitude has earned him the fond nickname of "Happy Hal the Jeweler's Pal."

An accomplished jeweler, Hasselschwert's creations range from his intricately enameled jewels to the magnificent University sceptor and medallion in the Library.

"What I really want to do is experience life. I want to do as many silly things as I possibly can. If something should happen to me now, well, I've lived a full life. But for now I want to continue cramming things in."

And that's DR. GENE POOR, assistant professor of industrial education and technology, who's first love is designing and building things. He's progressed from building a bowling alley in his aunt's basement during high school, through designing and building dissolve units and programmers for multi-media presentations, to designing and building his own home in Arlington Woods, south of Bowling Green.

"I spread myself so thin, though," Poor said. "It's unbelievable how thin I can be spread."

An avid Albert Brooks fan, Poor admitted, "In the back of my mind I see myself as a performer . . . I'm a frustrated performer. For the past five years I have been entertaining and educating in my classrooms. I know I can entertain, but I have to find the effective balance between the two."

And in his search for that balance, students will benefit from a fresh, enthusiastic approach to learning . . . after all, anyone who worships Albert Brooks can't be boring.

Dr. Poor demonstrates his entertaining abilities to an advanced photography class.

Center for

The Center for Continued Learning, established August 1, 1974, is open to people desiring advice and counseling in vocational and educational areas.

The Center was created when university officials recognized the need for a clearinghouse for educational opportunities for persons, mainly women. Many women wanted to continue their education formally or informally and wished to add to or change their roles.

A task force of 20 women under the direction of Dr. Annette Johnson was chosen by Paul R. McKee, director of Continuing Education, in January, 1974. Their job was to set policies for the Center and develop a system for idea feedback. The task force later became the Advisory Council for the Center.

Services at the Center located on S. Main include personal counseling to develop future job and educational plans, information about registration procedures and academic programs at area institutions, and career information.

"Already we have seen a number of women who are raising or have raised families and who now wish to get involved in other activities," Suzanne Crawford, counseling specialist, said. "Many don't know their own skills and interests and how they can be best put to use."

According to Crawford, many clients have decided to continue their education after coming to the Center.

"We have had several people return to school from the Lifework Planning Workshop," she said. "Through the course, some found part-time jobs to help match with their long-term career goals."

One client who was marketing crafts at home learned of the opportunity to teach at Michael J. Owens Technical College in Toledo. "We were instrumental in directly supporting her craft endeavors," Crawford added.

The Lifework Planning Workshop, team-taught by Crawford and Sandra Wright, educational specialist, aids persons in exploring vocational interests and skills, and suggests alternatives in preparing for changing fields or for entering or reentering the job market.

"We provide structured situations whereby we help the people involved determine their interests that they can develop in the future," Wright said.

Fall programs included the Lunchtime Conversation Series which featured local women engaged in challenging volunteer or business activities followed by an informal discussion and brown bag luncheon. Topics such as consumerism, politics, and Title IX of the educational amendment which prohibits sex bias were discussed.

Wright also teaches a Women's Lives course which revolves around researching published women's autobiographies.

"Few people know the names of famous women and what they have done," Wright said. "My objective is . . . for a member to leave with a sense of women's history."

The Center is committed to part-time work for women, Johnson said. All staff members are employed about 16 hours a week.

"Part-time work is useful for homemakers," Johnson said. "We try to create a model of part-time work to show that an operation can function that way."

The Center is open 9a.m.-5p.m. Monday through Friday, and by appointment. All services are free of charge.

Marching Band...

They march to the beat of the same drum.

9:00 a.m. Saturday morning. A quiet stillness surrounds Kreischer Quadrangle. Then, with a crash of cymbals and a thunderous drum roll, the 170-piece Falcon marching band under the direction of Mark S. Kelly, better known to members as "Chief," begins its pre-game rehearsal. Sterling Farm comes alive with music in anticipation of the afternoon's football game.

Excitement reigns as the group lines up in formation and begins its daily 15-minute routine. Following this, they pace through their afternoon show and the squads prepare to begin their formations. Movements are geared toward groups of five or six people and enforced by squad leaders who establish order.

Daily two-hour practices are also held throughout the week. The group assembles on the field at 3:45 p.m., Monday through Friday, and continues their workout until 6:00 p.m. . . . rain or shine.

Alternates are important during practice. They not only participate in rehearsals and take an active part in marching, but they are responsible for keeping members in step. This is done with a two-and-a-half yard pole. Placed at the feet of each member, the pole measures marching steps taken by squads and controls unity.

Impatience fills the air as the group nears perfection. Lunch dismissal occurs after director satisfaction of overall sound and performance has been reached.

Left: Director Mark Kelly, named one of the ten outstanding musical directors in the United States and Canada in the October, 1974, issue of "School Musician Director and Teacher," commands his band to action. Right: Everyone must achieve perfection . . . no exceptions.

After lunch, uniformed and ready for their pre-game march, the members convey a certain amount of tension. The show's success is on everyone's mind.

As the group marches onto the field shortly before the game, their impatience soon changes to confidence. The signal is given and the drummers strut through their paces followed by the entire band. A feeling of pride swells from every BG spectator while the ensuing sound fills the stadium.

Both pre-game and half-time performances are successful, leaving impressive memories embedded on spectator's minds. And the band? Their exuberance lasts for only a short while, as they set their sights for the next performance. They'll knock 'em flat with the next one.

Queen Richard Reigns, creating mixed emotions.

It was an unusual situation, to say the least.

As Rick Morrow stepped up to accept the honor that was about to be bestowed upon him, there were cheers, but there were also plenty of boos.

From the front row, a cheerleader and an accomplice threw tomatoes at Morrow in a vain attempt to make him look like a walking pizza.

And throughout the assembled multitude that watched the ceremony, there were people wondering out loud about Morrow's sexual leanings.

The reason for the tumult was simple: Morrow had broken a decades-old tradition by being the first male Homecoming person ever elected.

His candidacy began as an attempt to break traditional sex roles at the University and unify the student body for homecoming.

"Sex roles on this campus and in the U.S. are changing," Morrow said after his coronation. "The University is lagging behind.

"The students have held on to traditions too long," he added. "If they hold racist or sexist viewpoints they should change.

"I don't know if I unified the school physically," Morrow said, "but I did mentally. Everybody talked about it."

That they did. In fact, mail to Alumni Director James Lessig from University alumni was said to have increased by about 300 per cent after the election.

Many people were concerned that Morrow was making a farce out of the University, not just breaking tradition. The fact that the Homecoming committee chose a male to escort Morrow at his coronation — despite Morrow's desire to have a female escort — added to concern about the University's image.

There were times when even Morrow had doubts about his new position and thought of giving it up.

"When I was thinking of abdicating my father told me to stick it out," Morrow said later. "He said he'd rather I played football, but that this was alright."

Morrow wasn't the only controversial thing about Homecoming 1974.

A gigantic Dixieland jazz tent in the Stadium parking lot proved a disaster when only several hundred people turned out for three days of jazz music.

University President Hollis A. Moore Jr. said the tent "went over about as well as Ford's pardon of Nixon."

And the Homecoming concert, featuring Dionne Warwick and comedian David Brenner, met a similar fate. Fewer than 2,000 persons bought tickets for the event, prompting complaints that the Union Activities Organization — the concert's sponsor — was not attuned to the musical tastes of the student body.

Perhaps the key to the 1974 Homecoming was its diversity — there was something for everybody to dislike.

Little is known about the University's Popular Press even though it has been in operation for five years, explained Ray Browne, founder of the Press and director of the Popular Culture department.

The Press, which began as a supplement to the Popular Culture department to produce unobtainable study materials, has printed 45 books since 1969 with six or seven ready for galleys this year. It also publishes a quarterly Popular Culture journal, and a National Association of Popular Culture newsletter.

Alice Brown, full-time assistant editor, is in charge of book layout and cover design, the latter being primarily furnished by student input.

Type is set for each manuscript in 100 University Hall and then sent to a commercial press in Ann Arbor, Michigan, for final printing.

Originally funded by the Arts and Science College, the Press has since obtained a small operational grant from the Provost.

Unfortunately, the Press cannot meet national standards because of its financial instability, Browne said. Big publishing companies can work through wholesale operations on a national scale, but the Popular Press must depend on mail distributions and sales to libraries.

According to Browne, few prospective customers are reached through advertising. Even a "large number of the faculty don't know we (the Press) exist," Brown said. "Ironically, we're better known nationally."

The shortest run for the Press per book is 1,000 copies. This minimum amount must suffice for more cannot be printed until the originals are paid for, Browne explained.

Overcoming a slow start due to lack of manuscripts, the Press presently must turn down three-fourths of the manuscripts submitted from all over the world. A lack of funds, and the desire to retain a popular, 20th century image also limit publications. Poetry and novels will not be accepted.

Gays Speak Out!

By Sherry Kirkendall

Sexism — the theory and institutionalization of a practice in which one sex or sexual orientation is considered to be better than another.

Gay liberation, a new social ideology, has become a part of a general struggle against sexism. Twenty-five years ago there were few gay organizations and those in existence served only a social function, as a place to meet other gays.

Then in 1969 came the war demonstrations, and with them came gay liberation. It was a June night in New York City and police raided a gay bar. Student activists resisted arrest and soon 3000 gay people were fighting in the streets. The organization formed as a result of this and took the name Gay Liberation Front.

To 20th century American "straights", gay is a synonym for lesbie, dyke, queers, fairy, and faggot. But the term gay has a special significance to homosexuals because it is a term that grew out of the gay culture itself in the late 1940's. "For a long time," said one gay male, "the term was not known and not used outside our own culture and for us it was kind of a password."

"Coming out" is a phrase used by gays to mean a total acceptance and propagation of your sexual orientation. According to one gay, "coming out" has a series of phases. First, you admit it to yourself; next, share it with friends; then, identify with other gays; and finally, work publically in the struggle for gay liberation.

"Internally, coming out is an emotional trauma," said one Bowling Green gay. "For a long time you realize it, but you repress it. You don't want to admit it to yourself

"I know there are a lot of gay people (on campus) who want to meet others but just don't know how. We need a movement."

because your social orientation tells you that homosexuality is sick. You don't know anybody else that is gay and you feel like you're the only one like you in the whole world."

One gay BG male estimated that there were as many as 1500 gay people on BG's campus and then quickly added that over two-thirds of them are still a part of a "phantom population." "They're still in the closet," he said.

One of the reasons given for collegiate closet homosexuality is the lack of an active gay movement on BG'S campus. "I know there are a lot of gay people who want to meet others but just don't know how," said one gay female reluctantly. "We need a movement," she said, "and not just to handle social problems, but to deal with psychological, physical, and legal problems as well."

Reasons given for gay movement failure at BG are varied and at best guesses. "The lack of an active movement is part of a whole social and political apathy in this country right now," offered one gay female.

Another gay saw it as a direct result of the college. "It could be because BG is BG," he said. "It draws a lot of people out of the area — people from small towns who lack experience with homosexuals."

According to one gay male, the last real gay movement on campus was in the spring of 1972. "Now we all know each other within limited circles," he said. "There's a minority of us and we tend to search each other out. Like all minorities we have our own subtle cues which identify us to other members within our sub-culture."

"We have our private parties and there's always Toledo on the weekends," offered a gay male. "The PRO (Personal Rights Organization) has a big party, usually around Halloween every year, and you get dressed up — a lot of guys go drag."

Drag, in its most general sense, is dressing up like a member of the opposite sex. According to the BG gays interviewed, it's a more common practice among men than women. "It's mostly a mockery, making a joke of the stereotyped female," explained one male. "However, some of the guys really get into it and seriously think of themselves as women. We even refer to them as she."

"The sexual revolution of the 1960's has changed a lot of ideas about sexual morality," said one gay. "Prejudice today about the gay culture is more of a personal hangup and less of an overall social one." But many gays interviewed expressed anxiety at the thought of future job-hunting. "You can tell the truth and lose a job, or live a lie and keep it," summarized one gay.

In a society that traditionally changes only when it is forced to change, is there a part for radicalism in the gay culture?

"Of course, radicalism has a place — homosexuality is a radical idea," said one gay. "However, I doubt the necessity for militantism," he added.

Most of the gays interviewed admitted, if somewhat reluctantly, that there seemed to be some truth to the stereotype of the arts as a refuge for gays. "I think there's a certain amount of truth to the stereotype if only because we're oriented to that image," said one gay.

However, one gay male was quick to add that "there are more gay people in business and athletics than anyone would believe." "I truly think people in the arts are just more expressive and less inhibited about their preferences — including their sexual ones," said a gay female.

"I told my father and he hugged me and told me he loved me."

In a society that at times seems to condemn the exceptions to the norm, is there a place in religion for gays? According to the BG gays interviewed, there is no place in the 20th century American interpretation of the religious doctrines for the gay sub-culture. "We're seen as sinners who need cleansing and they view our sexual habits as perverted," said one gay male. "But the Bible was written during procreation when the race had to propagate and develop. Now, with overpopulation staring us in the face — it's time for a revamping of those ideas," he stressed.

"I think it's important for those who choose to believe to force a change in the religious doctrines," said a gay male. "And the phenomenal development of churches to cater specifically to gays signifies the need for religion in the lives of some homosexuals. Unfortunately churches aren't ready for homosexuality yet."

"The institution of the family can be your greatest refuge or your stage for a continuous front," said a gay male. "Many parents have a definite set of mental images of homosexuals in which they see us as child molesters, transvestites, bed-hoppers, etc.," he added.

"I told my father and he hugged me and told me he loved me," said one gay female. "I was lucky." "My mom found out — now I lie to her," offered a gay male. "I have to promise not to see my gay friends — they're promises I have no intention of keeping." Others stated they would never tell their parents and even swore they would lie to cover it. "It would give my parents a heart attack," said one gay in justification.

Does the coverup extend to their friends? "Definitely not!" stated one gay male. "If I acquire new friends and I really like them I feel I have to tell them or they won't really know me. And my closest friends know. It doesn't seem to make any difference — or course if it did, they wouldn't be my closest friends."

"I know people as people first and then as straight or gay," emphasized one gay. "And I think that's the answer to the whole problem of sexism. Gay people have to be taught to accept themselves as a viable part of society, and straight people have to be educated to see gays as productive and valuable social entities who differ only in their sexual preferences."

"I know people first and then as straight or gay. And I think that's the answer to the whole problem of sexism."

In an attempt to give BG students a conceptual framework within which they could move toward a better understanding of gay liberation, a course in gay liberation was offered in the Department of Experimental Studies fall quarter. The class, under the direction of Mike Saba, was described as "a unique chance for gay people to discuss and examine their culture in an academic setting."

Yet only six students enrolled in the class. Trevor Phillips, head of Experimental Studies, said "We thought it would attract a fair amount of people both in and out of the movement. But then we've never been able to predict which courses would go and which would fold," he said.

Editor's Note: This story was sent to the printer prior to the formation of the Gay Union in mid-February. An active gay movement is now available for participation by anyone.

The Cardinal Room was open 24 hours a day to provide food for the lodgers.

And students volunteered blankets and pillows for the travelers' bedding.

The Health Center's 30 beds were also filled and various fraternity and sorority houses, as well as dormitories, provided extra sleeping quarters.

Although the stranded included a number of parents of University students, most seemed to be persons headed north, where I-75 was blocked for nearly two days.

The open arms of the University and its students was best summed up by Dr. Richard Eakin, vice provost for student affairs: "The response on the part of the University, particularly students, was heartwarming. Their openness and willingness to assist travelers was more than could be imagined."

Student Profiles

The following eight pages of The Key are dedicated to outstanding students who often go unnoticed by their peers.

Steve Griebeling

Steve Griebeling, senior psychology major and member of the University's ski team for three years, considers the ski team one of his best experiences at school.

He attributed this to the good team spirit that began with the fall workouts and continued throughout the season. He mentioned that skiing is usually an introverted sport, but that the team faced the frustrations of losing and the joys of winning together.

Griebeling started skiing when he was 10 years old and has been racing for eight years. He was involved in the United States Ski Association (USSA) Junior Alpine Program, and was a member of the Ohio "A" team his four years in high school.

As a freshman, Griebeling competed in the intercollegiate events on Saturdays and raced in the USSA/Senior Alpine program on Sundays. That year he won the Ohio Senior Alpine Championships.

In a lighthearted moment, Griebeling said that his immediate career aspiration was to become a ski bum. More seriously, however, he is considering attending graduate school, Divinity school, or working in a counseling or social work program.

Being the only music major in harpsicord performance at the University is quite a distinction for petite Cathy Gordon, a junior in the ever-growing College of Musical Arts.

As such, she must present a full recital and do independent research as well as fulfilling the required course work for a music major.

"The harpsicord is unique," she explained. The two keyboard instrument plucks the strings rather than hitting them with a hammer as a piano would. Although sustain and volume variety are impossible, the keys can be set for different sounds.

Gordon became interested in the harpsicord during her freshman honor sessions in music. After listening to her instructor, Dr. Vincent Corrigan, perform, she was hooked.

"I don't know if I want to say this, but the competition isn't all that stiff," she added. "There are more opportunities to play."

And Gordon has found many opportunities already.

She played in the opera "Dido & Aeneas" presented winter quarter, and performed with the Baroque Ensemble throughout the year.

"On keyboard, you're by yourself," she explained. "You don't get much of an opportunity to play with other people. That's why I really enjoy Baroque Ensemble.

"I've always wanted to be proficient on some instrument," Gordon said. "I want to feel like I'm a halfway decent musician. I'm not there yet, but someday I will be."

Gordon hopes to attain a master's degree in musicology and teach harpsicord on the side.

Nick Ruggeri

Taking five leads and eight supporting roles in major theatre productions at the University has kept senior Nick Ruggeri busy in his past four years.

He spends at least three hours a night in play rehearsal and approximately 60 hours per show.

"It definitely interferes with studying," he said.

Ruggeri hopes to act professionally on stage, according to him, the only legitimate theater. This would be with either regional theatre groups or resident community theatre groups.

"I'm not sure if I want to do anything else," he said.

Eventually he might attempt directing, but not right away, he explained.

Ruggeri feels that students are truly interested in theatre at BG.

"Every once in a while, a stranger comes up to me and compliments me on a job I've done," he said. "It's kind of a nice feeling to know that people go to other things besides football games.

"The theatre goes over well here," he added. But so does eating. Around mealtime, one can find Ruggeri on the main stage of Harshman cafeteria's kitchen — preparing all those delectable delights for his fellow students.

Patty Nally

After working five summers at a camp for trainable mentally-retarded children, senior Patty Nally decided this would be her life's work.

She is majoring in special education, specializing in Educable Mental Retardation (EMR) and Trainable Mental Retardation (TMR).

"I just really like the kids," she said.

Nally is currently involved with PROJECT MERGE, a concept of teacher preparation in special education designed to meet the needs of special education teachers in varying educational settings.

She spends five weeks in a "methods" course where she is taught how to teach, followed by 15 weeks of actual student teaching.

"Being in the room teaching is the easiest part of my job. At least, it's what I like the best," she said.

"Planning is the hardest because it takes the longest time," she added. But she mentioned that she looked forward to going to her school every day.

This spring, Nally will be participating in the Student Council for Exceptional Children's Convention to be held in Los Angeles.

Curt Hazlett

Flying to Columbus to cover a meeting of the state legislature, fielding probing questions from a journalism 103 class, and interviewing people such as Leonard Nimoy and Gene Roddenberry are a few of BG News Editor Curt Hazlett's activities.

But he also determines editorial policy, handles complaints, and shuffles papers as any administrator would.

Under daily deadline pressure, Hazlett oversees the complete operation of the news from story inception to final layout production with his 50-member staff in their 106 University Hall office.

"The press is a powerful force," Hazlett said. "I feel as though, honestly, this organization is the most powerful student organization on campus. But along with the power comes a feeling of responsibility or fear that you might abuse it."

"First thing we want to do is to portray as much of the student's environment as we can, in any way that we can," Hazlett explained. "But secondly, we want to really explain certain issues and trends that could seriously affect a student's life, for example, financial allocations, dorm regulations, and academic problems."

"It's a terrible thing to exist someplace without knowing about the place in which you exist," he added.

"We like to think that we've developed a system of nerves throughout the campus and our reporters keep in close contact with people such as SGA officials, administrators, faculty, and even our friends," Hazlett said. "And we usually keep pretty good tabs on activities that will develop."

Billed as an independent student voice, the BG News is responsible to the student, not the administration, Hazlett said.

"We have an adversary relationship with the administration. They talk to us because they're afraid not to. A lot of times they have something to gain by talking to us, or lose by not talking to us," Hazlett said. "Keeping secrets is not looked upon well at the University. The academic situation should be free."

"A lot of people on this campus don't even have a basic knowledge of what journalism should be," he continued. "They expect a newspaper to continually pat them on the back, give good publicity, and in general, act as a PR tool for them. But that's not the way I see it."

"The one thing this University needs less of is PR. What it needs is a good healthy dose of criticism and honesty," Hazlett said. "And I hope we supply it."

Jackie Garringer

Being accepted into medical school is quite an honor, and senior Jackie Garringer, one of a handful of University students chosen this year, is worthy of the award.

Garringer has majored in chemistry, minored in biology, and was a lab assistant for the organic and biochemistry classes for six quarters.

"Being a lab assistant reinforced the things I wasn't quite sure of and set them straight in my mind," Garringer said. "I became more confident. It (chemistry) might have scared me in the beginning, but it doesn't anymore.

"You can get into med school with practically any major from college, but a person who really tries to get a well-rounded science background will be very prepared for med school," she stressed.

After taking a two-hour course load spring quarter, Garringer said, "I'm ready to hit the books right now. It's the only way you'll feel really confident and that is to get in there and punch."

For the next three years, Garringer will study and do clinical work at either the Medical College of Toledo or the Medical School at Ohio State — her final decision hasn't been made yet.

After this schoolwork, a two-to three-year hospital residency is required.

Then it's out on her own.

"I hope to possibly get into family practice or public health," she said. "The public health clinics, located in large cities, are actually family practice clinics where the state pays. I would make less money, but it would be more of an 8-5 job."

"It's hard to decide on the major field of specialization until you've actually been exposed to it," she added.

Garringer's brother was in med school while she was attending high school, and from reading his medical books, she became interested in the profession.

"I just know I'll get a lot of satisfaction from medicine," Garringer said. "I want to help people . . . and I enjoy working with people."

"That might seem like a stage answer, but I can't see working in a lab the rest of my life. It's just too alienated," she said.

"It's more fulfilling to know you've actually helped someone, even if it's only one person."

Tim Atves

"This is WFAL and Duke Spinner kickin' one out for Harmon three."

Tim Atves is a disc jockey because he likes it. As Duke Spinner, Tim can be heard on WFAL "Spinnin' out the tunes you like to hear."

But, Tim aspires to be a public accountant. The junior accounting major is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, national freshman scholastic honorary, and a member of Delta Sigma Pi, the professional business fraternity. He said he plans to take the Certified Public Accountant's exam some day.

Tim first became involved in broadcasting at the University last year when he made a record, "The Canadians", a tongue-in-check parody of Byron MacGregor's "The Americans." He attended an organizational meeting of WFAL, auditioned, and got his job.

Although Tim enjoys being a disc jockey, accounting is his career goal. "I just don't see myself sitting behind a turntable for the rest of my life," he said. "Radio is fun, but for me, I need more of a challenge."

Barb McKee

"Swimming at Bowling Green is a team effort," stressed Barb McKee, sophomore swimming sensation. "We don't think of ourselves as being special individuals . . . we're just members of the team.

"And we want to do good, not because we are pressured into it, but because we honestly want to," she added.

This team desire has kept BG on top of the MAC for the past five years. In the past season, McKee, herself, held the first place title in MAC backstroke competition, and a second place MAC standing in the 100-meter butterfly. Another one of her specialties is the 200-IM which consists of two laps butterfly, two laps backstroke, two laps breast stroke, and two laps freestyle.

"I just like swimming. I never worked for first place, with that one thought in mind, it just started happening," she said.

McKee mentioned that the surrounding MAC teams are getting stronger and have started awarding scholarships to top freshman swimmers. "This will hurt us in the future," she said. "If we want to keep our teams going, we'll have to start attracting swimmers with scholarships, too."

She also noted another detriment to future teams. "We can function in the present pool, but a new one is definitely needed. It hurts us because prospective swimmers are turned off by it," she commented.

"I really don't know why I came to Bowling Green, and I couldn't tell you why good swimmers are continually attracted to BG, but I'm glad I'm here," she concluded.

Housing with International House is the University's attempt to promote international understanding, according to Dorothy Brickman, acting director of the International Studies Program. It's a matter of putting the global world under one roof, and that's not easy.

The International House, formerly Wayne Apartments on Sixth Street, accommodates 42 graduate students and two undergraduates. About one-half of the residents are foreign students and one-half are American students. Several of the American students are out-of-state residents, Brickman said.

Joyce and Bob Johnson, graduate students who are residence coordinators of the house, said the out-of-state students broaden the house's international atmosphere.

"Since we have American students from all over the country here, our foreign students have an opportunity to become familiar with the various dialects and differences in our American culture," Joyce said.

The cultures of the world are well represented: Australia, Belgium, Ethiopia, Germany, Ghana, Norway, Pakistan, Thailand and the United States. Most students had never heard of Bowling Green until the University offered them assistantships and grants.

The four-person apartments allow roommates to get to know each other, but the students agree that a central meeting area, which the house now lacks, is strongly needed to encourage interaction outside individual apartments.

"Because we have no central gathering place we must encourage the residents to get together in groups of six, eight or 10 in each others' apartments," Bob said.

a Cosmopolitan Flair

For the most part, the situation indoctrinates the "foreign" students into the American way of life, as in the case of a Belgium girl speaking like an Ohio native. Most of the students readily adapt due to their former knowledge of the United States.

International House will hopefully demonstrate that a nation different from the U.S. is not necessarily primitive.

A striving to understand and to reach a common ground exists at the International House. Ideally, each student will learn more there than he or she would in any classroom in any country.

Campus Safety's Distaff Staff

The uniform is basically the same — gun holstered to the hip, gleaming badge, uniform of grey and black — except for the pants. Gail Munch, patrolwoman for Campus Safety, wears culottes and knee-high boots.

"It was hereditary for me to go into police work," Munch explained. Her great-grandfather was a police official, her grandfather was head of the Toledo detective bureau, and her father once contemplated police work but decided against it.

Munch's duties, ranging from traffic control and 100 mph chases to handling burglary complaints, are the same as any Campus Safety officer's, regardless of sex.

And she takes pride in her work. As a devoted Campus Safety officer, she tolerates people who verbally abuse her.

"They call me pig and I say, well, as far as integrity and guts, what more do you want?" she said.

Munch views her job as a challenge and enjoys the people she comes in contact with.

"When I hear a person yell across campus, 'Hi Gail,' it means so much more than the one that gives me a snub when I say hello and they don't say anything," she explained.

While patrolling the campus, Munch tries to find the time to stop and talk with students whenever possible.

"I'm no better than they are . . . I wear a uniform, but so what?" she said. "It's a job. I'm helping them though they may not realize it, but this is what police work is all about."

Mardi Gras

Students pooled their resources during the week of Feb. 3-8 and proved once again that "charity" is not a dirty word at the University, even during a recession.

To the theme of "Support Fat Tuesday," a total of $3,650 was collected during Charities Week — one and one-half times the amount raised last year.

A karate tournament brought in about $1,100; dormitory and organizational activities collected $1,530, and Union Activities Organization's annual Mardi Gras netted $1,020.

The Charities Board allocated funds to such groups as Muscular Dystrophy, the Heart Fund, Family Planning of Wood County and the BGSU Student Loan Fund. When possible, funds were given to local branches of national charities.

Gene Roddenberry,

Star Trek's creator and producer.

"Star Trek has a message for mankind. What we're trying to say is that humanity will reach maturity and wisdom the day it begins to value different forms of life.

"Viewers like the show because they see in the characters an old-fashioned insistence on personal integrity.

"The greatest mistake most science fiction writers make is thinking that it is something apart from regular writing. Writing is writing. It is basically about people.

"Commercial television as it now exists does not exist to entertain you; it does not exist to inform you; it merely exists as an advertising medium.

"The decision of what you see on the tube is made on whether it will sell toothpaste, deodorant, beer or what have you.

"We are standing today on the edge of new explosion in the area of telecommunications. What we are moving toward is a way in which every human being on earth will have total access to all the combined knowledge of mankind."

Leonard Nimoy,

Star Trek's Mr. Spock.

"Star Trek was, and is, very popular, and there are a lot of reasons for it: the material was good, and it still holds up; it's fun to watch, and you can watch a show six or seven times and still enjoy it; and we are all handsome, intelligent and excellent performers, as well as modest.

"I get very warm receptions when I speak to audiences. People come to hear what I sound like, to hear what I have on my mind, and maybe to ask me some questions. They don't know as much about me, I think, as they do about Mr. Spock.

"Is the show ever going back on the air? I doubt it. Nobody has approached me about a contract, but if they did I'd be glad to listen to them. But right now I don't know if it could go back on the air again."

"I travel all over the continent — big cities, small cities, but mostly college campuses. Interest in Star Trek these days is very great. We have gotten a large following. But I don't see Star Trek followers as loonies, as many people do. I guess there are some fans who are, but when people come to a theatre to see me perform they generally treat me very well. There haven't been any outbursts.

"People have their own ideas about what a public personality is required to do for them, particularly a television performer. I guess people figure that you are a part of their lives, and that they can deal with you like they would a relative. The only time it really gets to be a hassle is when I'm on the road. I don't like to be interrupted for autographs when I'm eating.

"I've been very lucky. The opportunities I've had as a result of playing Spock have been fantastic. Star Trek was a tremendous opportunity for me. After all, it made me a very wealthy man."

Tom Brokaw,

NBC News White House correspondent and anchorman for the Saturday edition of "NBC Nightly News."

"We had a kind of monster growing there at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue . . . the imperial presidency. There was at least a check on it as the result of Watergate."

"The danger is, the press, all of us in all our forms — magazine, news, television, radio — can develop the same kind of hubris the former occupant of the White House did. We kind of develop the sense that we can do no wrong . . . that we're infallible and not called to check by anyone."

"And we kind of get haughty out of the Watergate heroics. That would be a grave mistake on the part of my profession."

"The Watergate heroics were done by essentially a few, really tough courageous reporters . . . they alone should take the credit."

James McCord Jr.

Watergate conspirator who helped burglarize the Democratic Headquarters in 1972.

"It (Watergate) was the most massive coverup in the history of the Presidency . . . and it almost worked.

"I made the biggest mistake of my life — I agreed to carry out the burglary. I don't expect an acquittal, all I want is a new trial.

"Nothing for me accounts for the massive coverup that went on after June 17 except for the fact that the President (Nixon) must have known about it. I believe the President himself approved it.

"Watergate was probably the greatest detriment against any future Watergates.

"The Congress did an extremely good job under bad conditions. Some of them (the House Judiciary Committee) risked their political careers when they voted to bring an article of impeachment against the President."

When asked if he would apply for a pardon, McCord replied:

"NO! I think Ford has corrupted that enough. There is a very widespread suspicion throughout the country, rightly or wrongly, that there was a deal; Ford has not dispelled it. Equal protection of the law has not occurred."

Daniel Ellsberg

"The Indochina War is not over, any more than the Watergate coverup is over.

"The current president (Gerald Ford), by his power, by his attempt to make a deal with the tapes, suppressing those tapes by cutting off the investigation, is in fact continuing Watergate since Watergate is a coverup.

"The lesson of the Pentagon Papers can be seen as the lesson of the Watergate tapes. They show conspiratorial behavior — the Pentagon Papers over a period of 25 years, and the Watergate tapes over one administration. They show the continued abuse of the argument of national security.

"What we learned in Watergate and the Pentagon Papers was how much trouble presidents were willing to go to to spread their particular lie.

"They (the Nixon administration) took a lot of trouble to fool the public, and they did fool the public . . . to prevent organized resistance beforehand and to dull the resistance after they occurred.

"These illegal acts did not start with Nixon and they obviously have not ended with Nixon.

"No president in the past generation has earned the benefit of the doubt . . . when you take away the benefit of doubt, there is enough evidence to indict every one of them.

"If we made more of a practice of impeaching presidents when we discover they have broken the law, we may have much less routine lawbreaking by our presidents.

"If we cannot have any affect on these policies of domestic government other than replacing periodically one liar by another, then the knowledge of the way we've been misgoverned can be only despairing, disillusioning . . . (it) becomes pathetic.

"Democracy best describes what I'd like to see."

Frederick Storaska, director of the National Action Center for the Study of the Prevention of Rape and Assault.

"70% of all rapes are done by people women know (dates, fiances, etc.).

"When you scream you are forcing your assailant to make a commitment. He will either turn and run or shut up the noise.

"I'm more concerned with what to do if whatever you do doesn't work. Go along with the potential assaulter until you see a chance to safely react.

"The eyes and testicles are the best place to harm a man . . . but whatever you do, make sure it will not harm or hurt you.

"Rape is not a rarity but a reality."

Waiting in the Wings

Everyone enjoys an outstanding performance by the University Theatre, Mojo Theatre, or Theatre Unbound groups, yet the people on stage are only a small percentage of the total human input to any theatre presentation.

The costumes that depict a time period or a character's personality must be sewn by hand, rented, or improvised from garments in the theatre department's Moseley Hall costume shop; the props and set dressings must be built by aspiring set designers under the skilled guidance of John Hepler, the University's set designer; the make-up must be applied correctly, usually by someone else's hand; the lighting which adds form, dimension, and mood is carefully selected by an anonymous lighting expert; and the acting skill is too obvious to mention.

Then the director applies his hand to make the entire production cohesive. The elements — costumes, set, lighting, make-up and performances — blend hopefully into a masterpiece. Only when all segments work together can an outstanding performance be attained.

The people behind the scenes are just as important as the people on stage — they deserve a round of applause, a few curtain calls, and a standing ovation, too.

team sports

Football

It was billed as the year of the "No Names." Only six starters (three offense, three defense) remained from the 1973, 7-3 team which was at one time ranked among the top 20 teams in the country. Gone were 23 seniors, 12 of whom were two-year starters.

The Mid-American Conference and Bowling Green record books will prove that the 1974 football team was one of the best, even though they settled for fourth place in the MAC with a 2-3 league record.

Bowling Green was predicted to win two or three games during the fall campaign. No one could have guessed that the Falcons would score wins over Arkansas State, Southern Mississippi, and tie San Diego State in the final three games to record BG's 19th winning season in the last 20 years. But that's exactly what they did.

Led by freshman quarterback Mark Miller, sophomore sensation Dave Preston at tailback, a vastly improved offensive line and the second-best defensive team in the league, the Falcons made quite a dent in both the conference and BG record books.

As a team, the Falcons tied a conference record for fewest fumbles in a season with 14, and just missed the league record for fewest fumbles lost with a total of six for the season. In the last 10 games, Bowling Green's offensive unit did not lose a fumble. Also, the team matched a league standard of four field goals in a game against Toledo.

Preston put his name in the record book seven times on his way to becoming BG's best sophomore running back and the second best sophomore runner seen in the history of college football since OSU's Archie Griffin, in the 1974 Heisman Trophy winner.

Junior kicking specialist Don Taylor also got into the MAC record-breaking act as he became the all-time career leader in field goals with 25 after three seasons.

But one record that will never make the books, but should, is the one for most wins in a season over and above the wins predicted for the team at the start of the season. That's the one mark the 1974 "No Names" can be proud of the most.

Sensational #9

Sophomore tailback Dave Preston (9) pulled the unexpected on the football field this year. He finished among the nation's top ten players in rushing and scoring, and made people begin to forget last year's great, Paul Miles. Preston, a 5-11, 190-pound Defiance native, rushed for 1,414 yards in eleven games, put the ball across the goal line 19 times and broke or tied several league and BG records along the way. Here's the seemingly endless list:

- five touchdowns rushing in one game (Dayton) tied MAC and set BG mark
- five touchdowns scored in one game (Dayton) tied MAC and set BG mark
- thirty points scored in one game (Dayton) tied MAC and set BG mark
- five touchdowns accounted for in one game (Dayton) tied MAC and set BG mark
- 19 touchdowns in one season tied MAC and set BG mark
- 114 points in one season tied MAC and set BG mark
- 19 touchdowns rushing in one season tied MAC and set BG mark
- 41 rushing attempts in one game (San Diego State) set BG mark
- 324 rushing attempts in one season set BG mark
- eight 100-yard games in one season set BG mark

Coach Jackson

A successful football season at Bowling Green was marred by the sudden death of assistant football coach Carlos Jackson.

The 44-year-old coach died of an apparent heart attack after collapsing while working out in Anderson Arena on November 14.

Jackson, who lettered in football at BG as a halfback in 1955 and 1957, was the Falcon's pass coordinator until 1957.

With Don Nehlen's promotion to head coach in 1967, Jackson was promoted to assistant head coach. He was the only coach to assist on all of Nehlen's teams at BG.

Jackson, a native of Fostoria, was the leading rusher on the 1955 Falcon team which compiled a 7-1-1 record and finished second in the MAC. He received second-team honors that season.

He missed the 1956 season because of polio but returned to see limited action on the 1957 team that also finished second in the conference.

Students and teachers alike lost a dear friend in Carlos and one hopes that the love and kindness which was so much a part of him will be remembered by all and preached by many.

It was an up and down season for the University's club rugby team in the fall. But unfortunately, not enough ups for the squad to be nationally ranked.

The record was a good one at 9-4-1. Looking back at the season, there were some impressive victories. There was a 12-0 whitewash of mighty and powerful Ohio State and a 24-8 pasting of Elyria after an earlier defeat. Three more shutouts followed against Wheeling, Mahoning Valley and Traverse City. Also, an overall record of 2-0-1 was posted against Canadian teams.

But with the highs came the lows. Defeats were registered against Ohio University, Ohio State, Elyria, and Findlay.

From the halfway point of the season, the squad was a complex mixture of regulars, injured-but-still-playing starters, "rookies", second, third and even fourth-stringers, and anybody else on the bench.

Injuries which are a part of the bone-crushing game of rugby hit Bowling Green so hard that a regularly scheduled shuttle bus was initiated between the "A" and "B" teams.

All this led to Coach Roger Mazzarella's troops missing the national rankings for the first time in the last three years.

It would be hard to duplicate a 1973 season. Becoming champions of the 39-team Ohio Collegiate Soccer Association was hard, but holding on to it would be even harder. And it was.

It all started in the right direction. Bowling Green took its first two games, 7-0 and 4-0, over Kent State and Ohio Wesleyan. But the first of the two season-slumps occurred. The return trip from Oxford was supposed to be a happy one but Miami didn't believe in that. The Redskins surprised everyone and tied Bowling Green 2-2.

With the help of sophomore Tom Doriety filling the injured starting goalie's spot (Bill Heyne), BG rebounded from its disappointing Miami game by shutting out Western Michigan 2-0.

Next came a 1-0 win over Wooster in a rain-soaked game, followed by the state's number one rated team, Cleveland State. Fired-up from the Wooster game, Bowling Green slipped past the Vikings, 2-1, giving BG the number-one state rating for the first time in 1974 ... proving to everyone that the Miami game was not the end of the season.

What followed for the top-rated team was a 3-1 home victory against powerful Ohio State.

The soccer team went into the heart of their schedule with a 6-0-1 record, and a number one rated tag. When they finally looked back at the end of the season, they saw a final record of 6-3-1 and a spot into oblivion.

Three disappointing losses to Akron, 4-1, Ohio University, 2-0, and Northern Illinois, 4-2, wiped away a fine undefeated record and another invitation at the NCAA post season tournament.

The defense, anchored by senior co-captain Bud Lewis, only allowed 14 goals in 10 games during the season which came within one of equalling last year's record of 13. For his great effort at the fullback position, Lewis earned the Most Valuable Player's Award.

Field Hockey

The 1974 Women's Field Hockey Team proved to be stronger than last year's crew as they tallied to a 4-5-1 record for their fall season. The forward line had dynamic Ginny McGee at right inner and Sue Chorman at center forward which proved to be an extremely successful set-up — the two stickers proved to be the most consistent scorers for the team. Ginny McGee was honored by being the sole team member selected for the Buckeye II Team which played in the Great Lakes Sectional Tournament. Unfortunately, this was as far as McGee advanced.

The "A" Team fared quite well in the State Tournament at Oberlin College. They rolled over three of their four opponents with unquestionable triumphs. Luck did not favor the team in further State competition as they dropped games to Ohio State and Ohio Wesleyan.

Bowling Green hosted the annual Buckeye Association Tournament fall quarter, where they failed to record any victories. The team lost decisively to Ohio Wesleyan and could only hold Ohio University to a 1-1 tie.

Women's Volleyball

The Women's Volleyball Team posted their first winning season this year with an impressive 10-3 record. Coach Pat Peterson praised all the girls on their fine playing ability and teamwork and cited five senior members as the nucleus of the team: Gail Allen, Sandy Haines, Jane Pekarek, Pam Stahl, and Laurette Payette. All are backed by three or four years of playing experience. Coach Peterson felt there was a strong feeling of "Women first-Athletes second" on the team which served as an important link between the coach, the players, and the sport.

The overall season proved that last year's rebuilding of the team was beneficial, and that this year's team worked effectively as a unit. The "A" team advanced to the State Tournament where they were defeated in the first round of competition by Kent State. Coach Peterson viewed the loss as a disappointing performance. The women spikers managed to bounce back, though, and successfully trounced Defiance, but then dropped two crucial games to Ashland. This defeat prevented the team from advancing on to the regional tournament.

The "B" Team, not to be outdone by the Varsity, completed the season with a strong 11-1 record.

Cross Country

Their aim was to improve on their 1973 record of 3-5 and regain a berth at the NCAA's which they missed in '73 but had qualified for the previous four years.

What this year's edition of the BG cross country team accomplished wasn't a team berth but a one man sensation.

There's plenty of pressure when you label yourself a Bowling Green cross country runner. You're running in the shadows of Dave Wottle, Sid Sink, and Craig McDonald. But Tim Zumbaugh stood like a rock, ran like a gazelle, and made BGSU proud to nurse another great runner.

First, there was the first-place finish at the all-Ohio meet. Then, there was a 14th place finish at the Mid-American Conference championships. Surprising everyone but himself and his teammates, Tim took a sixth place at the NCAA Districts to qualify for a shot at becoming All-American.

He duplicated his fourteenth place MAC finish at the NCAA Championships at Indiana University to become All-American and the nicest surprise on the cross country scene at BG this season. His individual efforts on the season earned him the most valuable runner award of Coach Mel Brodt's squads.

The harriers finished a disappointing fourth at the Central Collegiates and another fourth at the MAC Championships, but went undefeated in dual meets, and won the All-Ohio and the first annual BG Invitational.

Indoor Track

The 1975 indoor track squad spent their seventh straight season running on foreign ovals recording a 4-2 dual meet mark for the first winning season in eight years.

While providing a springboard to the outdoor campaign, the indoor season also produced four school records under veteran coach Mel Brodt.

Senior Don See eclipsed the five-year 440-yard dash mark of Henry Williams with a 49.2 timing, while Ron Taylor bettered Ted Farver's 600-yard record with an effort of 1:11.3. The spring-medley-relay quartet of Randy Zimmerman, Tim LoDico, Taylor and Rick Hutchinson (3:31.1) and the two-mile relay of Tom Preston, Gary Desjardins, Bruce Vermilyea and Hutchinson (7:35.5) also erased the former marks.

The field event performances, plagued once again by lack of training grounds and ineligibility, provided few bright spots.

The thinclads qualified two events for the NCAA title run in Detroit's Cobo Hall: Bruce Vermilyea in the 880 and the distance medley relay of Dan Dunton, Taylor, Preston and Vermilyea which broke the Michigan Relays meet record enroute to meeting the standards at 9:55.1.

The one-and two-mile relay squads both missed qualifying by tenths of a second, as the two-mile foursome produced the most consistent efforts of the season with three relay championships.

Men's Basketball, close but no cigar.

It was a roller coaster season for BG's basketball team. But what many BG hoop fans will remember is the 82-80 defeat in overtime against Central Michigan in the Mid-American Conference Championship game.

And a championship game it was. Both BG and Central sported 9-4 league marks prior to the season's finale which paired both teams in a showdown at Anderson Arena.

The game never let up, from the opening tip-off to the final buzzer.

The score stood at 77-77 after forty minutes of regulation play. But after pouring on 32 points during that span of time, BG's super guard Jeff Montgomery had to leave the game with leg cramps. Taking advantage of this, Central's guard, Jim McElroy, scored all five of his team's overtime points to sever BG's seven-game winning streak.

After the final buzzer one team stood victorious; one team was alone in first place and NCAA tournament bound. To the dismay of the Falcon followers, it was Central Michigan.

But the season wasn't a total loss. Far from it, although numerous BG fans disagree, the 1974-75 edition of Head Coach Pat Haley's troops produced one of the most exciting seasons in the past decade.

Pre-season writers' polls had BG picked for second place behind Toledo while the coaches' poll chose the Fighting Falcons as the number one team.

Playing in the earliest league game ever, BG defeated host Eastern Michigan 74-71, followed by victories over Cleveland State and St. Joseph (Pa.). Senior Skip Howard made 10 of 11 shots from the field in a return match against Eastern to give BG a 2-0 league mark. The winning streak reached five games with a 100-69 victory over Ball State.

But the undefeated mark went out the door when BG lost to Detroit's superior team. Sporting a 6-2 overall mark, BG sneaked past invading Toledo in overtime as twenty-six Toledo turnovers to BG's 14 told the story.

The roller coaster ride became more apparent with victories over San Diego State, Toledo, Kent and Western Michigan, and defeats against Oral Roberts, Syracuse, Cincinnati and Ohio University.

One of the team's problems was its lack of good play at home. Could this have been due to the lack of support from the crowd? Were the Falcon hoopsters overrated? Were they really trying or just going through the motions? Was Haley capable of coaching a championship team? No one can answer these questions but one does ponder about the team's performance.

In one of its better games, BG defeated host Toledo 67-63 before it reached its second low point of the season with a 77-62 Miami loss.

But then the Falcon coaster went uphill to the tune of seven straight wins, three of those coming in league play. There was Montgomery's last second shot which made BG a winner at Western Michigan, a key victory at Ohio University and a 121-101 bombardment over Houston.

All this led up to that final regular season game in which BG fell short by time and points.

But the season was not over. BG received a bid to the National Commissioner's Invitational Tournament in Louisville, Ky., where BG upset Tennessee before bowing to the tourney's eventual champion, Drake.

It was a season full of accomplishments and leading the way was the trio of Monk, June and Skip.

Monk, a true basketball performer with uncanny shots, made All-NCIT guard, second team MAC, hit in double figures in 25 of 26 games, was the league's second leading scorer and averaged 30 points per game in his last four regular season contests. Meanwhile June Cash joined the 1000-1000 Club (career points and rebounds), and was picked as first team All-MAC forward, leading the league in rebounds. Howard had his best career game against Western Michigan while hitting 90.9% of his shots against Eastern.

The squad's best defensive player, junior transfer Steve Cooper, played quite well at times but was often used by fans as the scapegoat in more than one home game. Two other BG rookies, center Ron Hammye and guard Larry Wingate, showed signs of good college players and will gain in ability with a year's experience under their belts.

The question which now remains about the season is whether University administrators were pleased with the season. If one listened only to the University's student body, Coach Haley would be coaching elsewhere next season . . . but only time will tell.

Around the Women's Building they're known as "Hagar's Hotdogs" — on the court they are the dynamic Bowling Green Women's Basketball team.

The women hoopsters began their 1974 season by blasting Wright State University out of Anderson Arena with a 86-36 defeat. Ohio State, Wittenberg, Kent State, Cedarville, and Miami followed in rapid succession with BG victorious.

The women suffered only two regular season game losses: Ashland College (82-67) and Cincinnati (60-48).

The team advanced to the State Tournament at Ohio Northern University with a 15-2 record and a third-place seeding behind OSU and Ashland. Bowling Green successfully overcame KSU, Miami, and Ashland, only to lose to OSU in the finals. This marked the second straight year that BG accepted a runner-up position in State Tourney competition.

This did not constitute the end of the season for the women. Rather, they went on to Illinois State University to compete in the Midwest Regional Championships. The team split their games 2-2. Defeats were suffered to the University of Wisconsin (Oshkosh) and Ball State. Victories were sustained over Southern Illinois and Marshall. The series earned the female cagers a 15-5 overall record and a sixth place regional finish.

Hockey- Falcons iced in championship

"Defeat can come by only a margin of inches" goes the locker room reminder before each game.

Bowling Green's hockey team found the saying true in its post season tournament action last winter with a margin of three inches and the clock running fifteen minutes too long.

It was at the Central Collegiate Hockey Association (CCHA) playoffs at St. Louis that the icers' season came to an abrupt close.

Sporting a 4-0 third period lead in its semi-final game against Lake Superior, BG's hockey team sputtered and stopped.

The Soo Lakers scored six goals in a 15-minute span, including three goals in slightly over a minute, to win 6-4.

The defeat might have been less demoralizing had it not been for the fact that freshman Dave Easton's backhand shot was three inches over the empty goal with 30 seconds left in the game and LSSC leading 5-4.

But despite the shocking loss to Lake Superior, Coach Ron Mason's Ice House Gang sported the best hockey season in BG's short six-year history.

The 1975 icers won more games (23) than any other Falcon hockey squad while only losing ten (tying the mark for fewest losses in a season).

The small problems included a defense corps that missed 100 games due to injuries. Only All-CCHA performer Roger Archer (voted the team's MVP by the Rink Rats) and freshman Tom Thomas dressed for all 35 games.

The Falcons were rated in the top ten in the nation for ten weeks this season, moving as high as seventh place.

BG's top wins came over Boston University, 3-2, and Michigan State, 7-4, when both teams were rated second in the nation.

Senior Bob Dobek, with 21 goals and 58 assists, set

BG's career marks in assists (134) and points (222) as he finished out a highly successful three-year stay at the University.

Dobek led the CCHA in scoring for the second consecutive year and was the only unanimous All-CCHA first team selection for the second straight year.

Doug Ross (34 goals, 29 assists) became the Falcons second, first-team CCHA forward following Dobek on BG's scoring list.

Freshman rookie Mike Hartman (34 goals, 27 assists) who placed on the All-CCHA second team.

Hartman set BG's freshman goal-scoring record and is the only one of the top four scorers who will be returning next season.

Goaltending was a strength for the Falcons with sophomores Mike Liut and Al Sarachman minding the store all season.

And who can forget Roger (Stop the Puck) Archer. In four seasons at BG, he made three of four CCHA tournament teams, including this past season. Roger was so popular with the fans that there was a mid-season movement to have his famous #3 jersey retired following the season.

Roger, Dobie, Buckwheat, and the rest of the departing seniors will be missed, but with rookies like Mike Hartman coming in, next season promises to be even more interesting.

M'm M'm good! That's what Coach Jean Campbell's Swimmin' Women are. Boasting five All-Americans after last year's competition in the National Championships at Penn State, the women opened their 74-75 season by pounding a young Miami team 82-40.

They then moved on to dominate the annual BG Relay meet and the Mid-American Invitational held at the Napoleon Aquatic Center.

During winter quarter, facing much stiffer competition, the tankers became an international powerhouse in grabbing a decisive first place finish at the Sixth Annual International Invitational at Waterloo University in Canada.

Then came Michigan State. It was nip-and-tuck throughout the meet with an outstanding performance in the 400-meter free-relay by junior Becky Siesky, but BG still lost. Statistically, the BG squad out-swam MSU, but the Spartans placed first and third in diving providing the all-important points possible for a win.

The tankers bounced back the following week to notch an uncontested victory over 28 teams in the Ohio State Championships at Youngstown State.

Bowling Green finished second to Michigan State at the Midwest Championships at Central Michigan. Several best times were posted, and the 200-meter free-relay team of Gail Sailer, Betsy Fisher, Valerie Newell, and Siesky broke the '74 National record (1:42.8) with a time of 1:41.45.

The culmination of the season came when 11 swimmers traveled to Tempe, Arizona, for the Swimming Nationals. Despite unfavorable weather conditions, BG placed in the top 40 out of 139 teams. Barb McKee, Fisher, Siesky, Sailer, Sharon Ackron, and Newell were named All-Americans after the meet. McKee took individual honors by placing 13th in the 100-meter backstroke while Siesky received honorable mention for a 17th place finish in the 50-meter freestyle.

Men's Swimming

It was a season with two types of streaks.

Unfortunately, the winning one was too short while the losing one was too long.

Following an 85-29 thrashing by Eastern Michigan in the season's opening meet, the team, under head coach Tom Stubbs, traveled to Florida for a working vacation over the Christmas holidays.

The tankers made Coach Stubbs look like a genius when they returned and put together a string of four victories.

The disaster which followed brought Bowling Green swimming to a standstill.

Although the ensuing six straight losses were against swimming powerhouses (Central Michigan, Notre Dame, and the MAC's top two teams, Miami and Kent), the setbacks were still recorded in the loss column.

The losing skid was finally stopped with a victory over Toledo — this being Toledo's first year of swimming competition. Sporting a 5-8 season record, the swimmers traveled to Central Michigan for the MAC Championships.

Although they broke four Falcon varsity records and bettered many of the season's best times, they could only manage to finish eighth in the league.

It was a season with highs and lows and a Bowling Green machine which stalled at the mid-way mark.

Wrestling

The BG wrestling machine, which has sputtered and stalled all season, came to a complete halt last weekend . . . ", wrote BG News Assistant Sports Editor Jerry Masek following the Mid-American Conference (MAC) wrestling championships.

And rightly so.

Bowling Green finished last in MAC wrestling this season posting a 0-8 league mark, and for the first time in the past 21 years suffered a losing season with an overall record of 4-11.

Of ten wrestlers competing at the MAC championships at Kent State, one wrestler, Mike Metting, scored all of BG's 10½ points.

The senior from Toledo (158 pounds) posted a 3-1 tourney mark which was good for third place.

The remaining wrestlers compiled a 0-13 mark at Kent.

It wasn't a pretty season for Bowling Green wrestling, but it wasn't actually the coach's or the wrestler's fault. Well, at least not the eligible ones.

Sporting a 1-2 record before the Christmas holidays, the team was rocked by the announcement that eight wrestlers would be ineligible academically during winter quarter.

The loss of the eight grapplers took away BG's depth at several weight positions and cast a thick cloud over the team's morale.

Within the next three weeks came the doctor's report on three other grapplers.

BG lost two of its four seniors to injuries which compounded the leadership and experience problems.

The largest loss to the squad was senior David Nieset, a three-year letterman, who many of the young wrestlers looked to for guidance and leadership.

Although Bowling Green suffered its worse season in 20 years, many of the season's untested and inexperienced wrestlers will have gained poise; and with that first year under their belts, it's only natural to believe that the next season will be a much more successful one.

Women's Gymnastics

It appeared to be a "Sunny-Side Up" year for the Women's Gymnastic's Team under new leadership. Charles Simpson assumed the head coaching position and newcomer Nancy Thorn was voted in as team captain.

Simpson's inspiration and influence seemed to be what the youthful Falcon team needed. The girls posted a 5-2 dual meet record, and finished second to a strong Kent State team in the Ohio State Championships.

Karen Glenn (all-around competitor), Marty Wacker (vaulting), Candy Suchecki (uneven bars), and Theresa Hoover (floor exercise and balance beam) were the most consistent scorers for the team. Theresa Hoover also took top honors in the Ohio State Championships on the balance beam.

Men's Gymnastics

Lack of adequate practice facilities at Bowling Green doomed the Men's Gymnastic's Club to a 3-7 season.

"Unless we have some assurance of a reasonable amount of practice time during the competitive season — strong assurance — we will not have a team next year," said Head Coach John White.

And the lack of practice showed in the team's performance.

Faced with the opportunity of finishing as high as fifth place in the Lake Erie Intercollegiate Championships at Kent State, BG lost ground in some unexpected places to finish eighth.

BG's side horse and all-around competitors fell well below their team's scoring averages for the season in their final competition of the season.

Fencing

En Garde! Is it Erroll Flynn? Douglas Fairbanks? Zorro? No, it's the University's Coed Fencing Team in its fifth year of inter-collegiate competition.

Although the team practices and travels together, the women's and men's scores are computed separately. The five women proved stronger than the men this year, recording a 6-9 dual meet record while the men posted a lopsided 2-14 dual meet finish. Coach Beverly Zanger explained the imbalance as too much of a yearly turnover for the men, although the nine-member men's team will only be losing one senior this year.

The women tend to have a carry-over in fencers from season to season, she explained. This year's team had three third-year competitors: Gail Radebaugh, Mary Gardner, and Linda Helmick.

Men's competition consists of epee, foil, and sabre; women compete only in foil.

Ski Team

The 18-member BG Ski Team, with Captain Jim Howell and Assistant Captain Steve Griebeling doubling as coaches, did very well considering there are no ski slopes in the immediate BG vicinity.

The team, consisting of separate men's and women's teams, had to travel each weekend for either practice or races during winter quarter. A total of 2500 miles was covered this season.

The women's team led the way this year as the team went against some of its strongest competition both in Ohio and on the road. They took a first place in Michigan, but the height of the season came with their win at the Ohio Governor's Cup — the first time a BG team received this award.

The men's team had a fair year, even though they were unable to place first in any of their races.

Things look good for the future of BG skiers. A new type of race was introduced this year in Michigan — dual slalom and dual giant slalom where members of different teams run side by side to the finish. This is comparable to the professional ski race.

As the competitive ski program gets stronger in the Midwest, BG will remain a part of it.

The Good, The Bad, and The Ugly.

The never-empty bag of dirty laundry.

The Happy Hour ritual . . . enough said.

Below: Late night pizza snacks resulting in early morning nausea.

The perpetual rainstorm.

Buying that $18 book for a class that isn't required for your major.

The BG News tells all.

At those prices, the food should at least be edible.

The trauma of drop / add EVERY quarter.

Escape to the Thursday $1 night movies . . . raw sex and all.

Wooster Wine Shop mellows even the deepest depressions.

Studying (?)
in the library
for final exams.

Self explanatory.

The inevitable.

Below: The attempts to foil bike thieves . . . an impossible task.

Being told to study in dorm rooms on the nights of high school basketball tournaments . . . after all, we're only fee-paying students.

And who could ever forget the winds of Bowling Green?
